Cholera Toll Feared 8,000

Gandhi Flies to Pakistan

NEW DELHI (Reuter) - Thousands of diseasewracked men, women and children are threatened by a cholera epidemic raging along the eastern border states of India and Pakistan which already has caused an estimated 8,000 deaths.

Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi flew into Calcutta today for emergency talks on the problem with the West Bengal government, Health 'Minister Uma Shanka Dikshit told India's Parliament Friday that 'at the rate they are coming in, nothing, let alone medicines, can be supplied to them.' Thousands can only stagger across the border, famished and diseased—to fall down on

The death toll in the Nadia The deaft toll in the Nadia district of India's West Bengal state alone has reached 2.550, official sources said. But newspapers report the figure at nearer 5,000 and there seems to be no way of stopping the disease rampaging through the undermourished rofugees from East Bengal.

Mrs. Gandhi said on arrival she would discuss moving the masses of refugees from overcrowded border districts of West Bengal and the airport to other areas, as well as the serious cholera situation.

MANY DEATHS

Authorities already are stopping refugees from enter-ing Calcutta itself and many

Atlantic Heads Back Formula

HALIFAX (CP) - Premiers of the four Atlantic provinces will go to this month's constitutional conference at Victoria still supporting the amending formula worked out at last February's session of federal and provincial leaders in Ottawa.

And most of them appear to favor concentrating on the constitution, leaving other subjects for later meetings.

'Appears to Be Best We Can Get'

Premier Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia said Friday he tavors the formula "because it appears to be the best we can get," but he would like to see it a little less rigid in its veto powers. Last winter he called it "somewhat cumber-

Mr. Regan says he would prefer a simpler arrangement requiring approval of any six provinces without regard to location.

Premier Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick reiterated his stand: "We support the for-mila." Earlier he said he hopes the premiers can move ahead with the amending agreement. Even if they do not, he "in no way" considers it a last-chance" conference.

Victoria Meeting 'Vital'

But Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island says that if the Victoria meeting June 14-16 does not make substantial progress toward constitutional change there is little chance the review pro cess can succeed. In that event, he says, the whole project, now three years old, is likely to die for lack of interest.

Premier Regan also said it is "vital" that real progress be made this time. Both he and Mr. Campbell say such matters as unemployment and other economic matters would be better discussed at another conference

West Pakistan is goin' t' come out of it with a chairman Robert W. Bonner of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. said Friday.

Addressing a business conference at the University of Western Ontario, Bonner said only Ontario and British Columbia, with per capita incomes of about $3,369 and $3,121, achieve any notable rank among American states, ranking 33rd and 42nd.

Canadian average per capita income in 1969 was a little more than $2,700 in U.S. funds, putting Canada ahead of only West Virginia, Alabama, Arkansas and Mississippi.

"There was a time when Canada ranked second only to the United States as measured by gross national product per capita," Bonner said.

"We are now fourth in world rank

by this measure — Sweden and Switzerland having displaced us in recent years."

He/said the Japanese per capita income has risen dramatically in vecent years and now approached that of the Maritime provinces, "and could at this rate and in this decade reach the national Canadian average reach the national Canadian average

He said for Canada to attain full employment or an unemployment rate of 3 per cent by 1972-73 would require annual economic growth of about nine per cent, "and we are not yet prepared as a matter of national policy to achieve growth of that magnitude."

To create employment for the 375,000 newcomers to the labor force in 1975 will require a capital investment of between $66,000 and $70,000 per job, compared with the $46,000 required to create a job in 1967, Bonner said.

In addition to a lifetime subsidy and the title of president emeritus for himself, Hoffa's wife, Josephine, who is recovering from a serious illness, will remain in her $40,000 a year job as director of the Teamsters' women's political arm for as long as she wishes.

Hoffa's son, James P., now a Teamster lawyer for local 289 and joint council 43-in-Dētroff, reportedly will be named a general counsel of year.

Teamster sources stressed that these and other assurances sought by Hoffa require the approval of the union's executive board or the Teamsters' constitutional convention, set for July in Miami Beach.

The assurances were given by Frank E. Fitzsimmons to Hoffe's lawyer, Morris Shenker of St. Louis, at a meeting in Teamster headquarters here Wednesday.

The following day, Fitzsimmons announced his candidacy for the union's top position after playing second banana to Hoffa for 30 years, Hoffa endorsed Fitzsimmons.

He talked on the phone for 10 minutes with nothing covering him except for the towel. As a result he found himself in court on indecent exposure charges.

Two young women in a school playground 60 yards from Jellyman's house had complained about his nakedness during his phone conversation. The women said there were about 300 youngsters in the playground at the time.

Jellyman pleaded innocent, saying: "I certainly did not intent to be obscene or indecent. It didn't occur to me that anyone could look into my own house."

A judge cleared him of the charge,

CASE OF MIFFED MAGISTRATE

Borowski Would Prefer Jail to Apology

WINNIPEG (CP) — Highways Minister Joe Borowski vowed Friday he'd rather go to jail than apologize for remarks about a Dauphin magistrate which led to his conviction five weeks ago for contempt of court.

In a letter to the judge who found him in contempt, he said:

found him in contempt, he said:
"I will go to jail not just for one year, but indefinitely, rather than apologize to the real culprit, or to publicly accept the proposition that magistrates and judges are immune to public criticism as you imply in your judgment."

Mr. Justice Israel Nilkman of Court of Queen's Bench, in of Court of Queen's Bench, in convicting Mr. Borowski April 28, gave him a one-year suspended sentence, on condi-tion he make a full apology within 60 days to Magistrate F. M. Manwaring. CASE WENT AHEAD

The contempt of court charge against Mr. Borowski charge against Mr. Borowski arose from comments he made in a radio interview in March about the Dauphin magistrate, who was hearing a case brought against the minister under the provincial Vacations with Pay Act.

The magistrate allowed the case to proceed, over the objections of Mr. Borowski's counsel that it was "frivolous and vexatious." The case was transferred later to Chief Magistrate Harold Gyles in Winnipeg who acquitted Mr. Borowski earlier this week and termed the matter a "regrettable incident."

Mr. Schreyer, questioned by reporters, said the cabinet was aware that Mr. Borowski "was going to make a statement of some kind, but we hadn't seen the contents."

Asked about Mr. Borowski's future in the cabinet, the premier said, "that will have to be determined later . . . obviously court orders are not to be ignored."

The letter, written on the letterhead of the minister of the department of public works and highways, said the charge under the Vacations with Pay Act had been serious enough to warrant proceedings under the Criminal Code.

"But even more serious to me personally was the fact that as a dedicated trade unionist, I was accused of the ultimate crime in the labor movement (beating a workingman out of his just earnings)".

"That sir, is like accusing a judge or jury of attempting a bribe. True, the case has been thrown out of court, thereby clearing my name, but, in the meantime. my family went through living hell for nine months, and I personally have been compared to Hitler, Stalin and other assorted degenerates.

"If an apology is warranted at all, it should be by the magistrate to my wife and family for the torment, the ordeal, the heartbreaking uncertainty they went through because of this decision."

largely subsided, but the question is far from settled and the issue is still in serious doubt. Because of this situation it is not clear to Canadians why their national government appears so contented to play a waiting game. Whatever the deep strategy of this may be, many people in this country would like to see a more positive and assertive stand taken in the matter of who has jurisdiction over the waters, lands and ice in the Canadian sector of the polar regions.

The question has had recent prominence as a result of the manslaughter case arising from a shooting affray on so-called Fletcher's Island. This floating 20square-mile ice floe has been the site of a United States research. station for the past twenty years, and the question before the United States courts involves the matter of jurisdiction over the scene of the Ottawa has opted out of the controversy, saying that Canada is willing to consider the ice island as a ship, which would give American courts jurisdiction. But at the same time Ottawa reserves its position over the principle involved. This concedes nothing as regards Canadian ownership, but unfortunately, it appears to leave the matter to the United States Supreme Court to decide.

That is too passive an attitude for a country which has every ostensible right to claim the wedgeshaped area of the globe lying between our northern mainland

> The issue assumes particular importance in view of the possibilities of future traffic through the Northwest Passage, and in view of the potential wealth of natural resources under the waters and ice of the polar regions. We have taken positive steps to assert Canadian sovereignty indirectly by emphasizing surface occupation of various northern points and by increasing the frequency of aerial reconnaissance over the area.

> Various visits to the Far North by Mr. Trudeau, the Governor General and the Queen have had their own special significance. But occupation and exploitation of the area remain the most compelling arguments for recognition of sovereignty.

> Mr. Trudeau, it is clear, has been loath to force the issue against almost inevitable United States opposition, for the latter country wants the northern waters to be regarded as international high seas, not only because of future traffic in the area but for the effect on other contentious places on the globe which historically have been open to

to do so. This has made the governand Energy and Resources Mana g e m ent Minister George Kerr in particular, very happy. If this sounds paradoxical, one must appreciate that Mr. Kerr is a rather exuberant politician who tends to shoot

Columbia.

This made him the darling of the ogical lobby but not of the bottlers, the beverage manufacturers, the retailers or, for that matter, the captains of the Ontario Conservative Party. So Mr. Kerr set up this Littering Control Council to cool the issue and hopefully provide him with reasons for not doing what he virtually promised to do. It was a realistic hope because Mr. Kerr appointed eight industrial representatives to the Council and four "public-oriented"

bottle, as they have done in British

(the Council's own phrase) members. Rather predictably, therefore, the council has unanimously recommended more stringent anti-littering laws -including fines up to $100 for litterers and up to $1,000 for municipalities and other operators of public areas who fail to provide adequate litter receptacles— but it is hopelessly split on what to do about disposable bottles.

THE littering control council of On- All of the industry-oriented members tario, which is something the opposed any of a number of proposals government set up to resolve the for glass-container legislation, while all government set up to resolve the for glass-container legislation, while all "disposable" hottle problem, has failed of the public-oriented members were inclined to such an approach, in particular the imposition of minimum deposits on reusable bottles, a retail tax on bottles that are not reusable, and the requirement that only reusable bottles be used for carbonated beverages.

> Its report therefore simply sets out various proposals without recommenda-tion, "confident that the opinions extion, "confident that the opinions ex-pressed will provide the necessary background to enable the minister to-make an informed and impartial de-cision." Mr. Kerr could hardly have asked for more and it is a safe guess there will be no Ontario ban on disposable bottles.

Unrealistic

If so, all's well that ends well. No doubt the glass industry, beverage producers and retailers are special pleaders in this situation, but banning the no-deposit, no-return bottle is hardly a realistic or effective solution to the problem of bottle pollution. A very strong argument can be made against it.

Experience in British Columbia, for example, which has a mandatory two cents deposit on bottles (and a refund on beverage cans), is that it has accelerated the trend to cans and plastic ntainers, largely because of lower handling costs at the retail level, Cans and plastic are no less of a litter problem than glass and are much more difficult to dispose of through municipal and composting and actually helps incinerators to burn better.

The great difficulty with "banning" disposable bottles is that the ban m take the form of a mandatory deposit to encourage consumers to return them. A law which simply said everybody must return their bottles on penalty of a fine would be no more enforceable than prohibition. And the trouble with deposits is that they do not, apparently, offer

Thus the Pepsi Cola Company two years ago issued a new run of 14,400,000 returnable bottles in New York City and increased the deposit from two to five cents to get them back. (A returnable re-usable bottle is not the same thing physically or economically as a non-reusable bottle; it is thicker and more expensive, and a beverage manufacturer must get them back for re-use or completely to the non-returnable kin But in six months the entire 14,400,000 Pepai Cola bottles hed disappeared from circulation, even though it meant consumers were forfeiting some $720,000 in

Similarly, litter surveys are uniform in revealing that one is likely to find as many discarded refillable bottles as the non-reusable kind.

A one-mile litter count of the Bedford Highway at Halifax in 1968, for example, turned up 6,921 items, of which only 75 were glass; of these 49 were reusable bottles and 15 were non-reusable bottles. Not so incidentally, there were 293 cans and assorted plastic items too numerous

The hard fact is that the disposable bottle is the product of public taste. In which is useful when crushed for landfill 1960, all soft drinks bottled in Canada were in refillable bottles and bottlers got an average of 20 refills out of each bottle. But as the effluent society progressed through the 60's this re-use dropped to 10 and in some cases five refills per hottle. Too many consumers came to regard the more expensive returnable bottle as a one-way container and many bottlers were forced by economics to convert their equipment to handle non-refillable containers. By 1969, refillable bottles made up only 68 per of the containers used Canadian soft drink industry, while nonrefillable bottles constituted 12 per cent and cans 20 per cent.

Necessary Step

It is argued by the anti-pollution groups, of course, that "banning the bottle" is a necessary political step to halt the trend, to convince merchandizers and discourage the throw-away philoso phy which is the root of the waste management problem. Obviously there is some merit in this but the question remains why an industry which supplies only three per cent of the litter and five per cent of the garbage should be singled out for special treatment.

In short, the real answer - and this was agreed to by all members of the Littering Control Council — is the re-use, recycling and reclamation of all wastes in plants built for that purpose. A prototype plant to do this is now being designed for the city of Kingston on $15,000 supplied by the Glass Container Council of Canada. The capital cost of $1,000,000 is expected to come industry and from the provincial and federal governments.

Pooh-Pooh for Renters

That apartmental Alcatraz at View and Quadra, prospective home for more than 300 families, is certain to upgrade your opinion of all other architecture.

The main reason for its supreme state of ugliness is the scruffy concrete finish, which builders are apparently working fruitlessly to improve. To bolster your faith in building technology, examine the sift finish on a new condominium block on Dallas just west of Douglas.

Farmer Construction - no doubt at a greater cost - has applied a cement finish that equals natural stone and helps make the structure one of the most pleasing apartments in town to look at. Yes, it's true the View-Quadra building is a limited dividend operation that will charge low rents, but the difference will be extracted in mental health from those who have to call it home.

Renters have to take what they can get, but maybe the following will give them some courage to demand better.

The controversial UBCM study released this week, telling the truth about B.C.'s municipal finances, has some municipal finances, has some interesting statistics on Victoria: Our city has more renters than owners of homes (52.48 per cent in 1966) and this is the highest figure for all of B.C. Victoria renters are also increasing their proportion at the fastest rate in the province.

Mayor Courtney Haddock is not your best friend, renters. Again this week he poohpoohed you plight, rejecting another call for city help from the rental grievance board he so reluctantly allowed to be born.

Lebawitz described the Lebowitz described the paper as proposing the use of 'tax leverage' against large corporations — especially resource industries — to increase government revenues which then would be used to create publicly-owned secondary industry. Secondary industry, as the NDP and Liberals have been saying for years, is the only way to guarantee stable employment.

Lebowitz's paper does not advocate wholesale nationalization of industry.

"Is public ownership of these major firms the answer? Because there has been inadequate information about the operations of these firms in the past and in the absence of any experience in decision-making by worker representatives, we must recognize that the transfer of these firms into public hands. recognize that the transfer of these firms into public hands ... could be accompanied by significant inefficiency and uncertainty." Twenty minutes later I sauntered out onto the station landing erea, ostensibly for a breath of air, and sneaked around to a telephone booth. No problem in reaching daughter, She wanted to know arrived and expressed delight that we had come. I asked her if she had received her mother's letter. She said no. She got the message Monday, after we had returned Victoria.

By association, the mail service has become to the lady of the house an ache in the sacrolitac.

the sacrollac.

She voiced her protest to an acquaintance who expressed a similar, complaint. The acquaintance had mailed material, first class, to Vancodyer from Victoria on a Monday for a meeting in the former city the following Saturday night. By the time the meeting opened, the material was still in transit.

The lady in our house, who has a high boiling point, still sizzles when she thinks about the service. Mildly, I have suggested that the mails today are much better than they were in the era of the Pony Express. I point out to her that at one time Victorians had to wait for ships to round the Horn bringing messages from England — a sages from England matter of months.

My soothing remarks have had little effect. ."Ho", she snorts, "I've had airgrams from London faster than I can get first class mail from Vancouver."

So I have taken another tack. I remited her that she has to recognize the influences of progress on mail service. Now, I point out, we have the advantages of mechanical processes undreamed of a relatively few years ago to apeed letters on their way. We're paying only double the price for stamps we used to in an earlier, more primitive past. All this progress, I tell her, takes a little time. Machines cannot be seized with the urgency of a message that has to get through. And on Monday, I added we'll have the Assured Mail Program.

have the Assured Mail Program.

Beyond all this, I declared in mumph, Jean - Pierre Cote, which picked up the lattered mail-hags Eric Kierans left behind in disarray, says Canada will have the fastest most highly mechanized meil service in the world in another few years.

The lady remains unreconciled. "What are the other countries going to use," she waks, "dog-teams?"

.As the season progresses many home gardeners will seek advice on problems pertaining to plant growth, and the most difficult task for the one who advises will be to

High water bills, and the most expensive equipment money can buy will be cited to prove that any suggestion of lack of water is totally

High water bills indicate one of two things; either the method of water distribution is inefficient, or the water is not being held within the root area of the plants for a sufficient length of time,

NOT EFFICIENT

Expensive equipment does not indicate efficient equipment. Streamlining, moulded pastic and a multi-colored finish provide eye appeal and increase the cost of production, but the design of the parts that distribute the parts that distribute the water determines efficiency.

An efficient sprinkler is one capable of distributing an equal quantity of water to all points within its range of

To determine the efficiency of any sprinkler is a simple procedure, all we need is a minimum of eight tin cans, the 14-fluid oance vegetable or fruit cans are ideal. It is a lot easier to compare the water content of the cans when they are all of the same capacity and diameter. Measuring can then be done with a yard stick or foot rule.

MEASURE CONTENTS

To perform the test, place the sprinkler in position and space the cans at five-form intervals on each side. Use more cans if necessary.

Turn on the sprinkler for a suitable period of time, (half hour, or until certain cans are filled) then shut it off and measure the contents of each

When you run this test in dozens of gardens with many types of sprinklers, you reach the point where you can predict the result as soon as you see the kind of sprinkler that is being used.

There are four types of sprinklers in common use today; the fixed type with no moving parts, the water being forced out one or several holes; the revolving sprinker with two or more arms and adjustable jets or holes in screw-on caps; the oscillating sprinkler with a punched water tube that moves from side to side; and the pulsating

'advertized" into the belief that the use of a small sprinkler on a large area is retrograde thinking, to say nothing of soiling our hands by moving a hose from one area to another.

Yet our simple tin can test will prove that the greater area a sprinkler covers the less efficient it is in laying an even quantity of water.

Another factor, and probably the greatest cause of sprinkling problems, is that a wide coverage sprinkler has

This means certain areas receive all the water and certain areas receive no water at all. To obtain equitable coverage, no sprinkler should be placed in the same spot on successive watering days. Such a basic rule negates the claims made for the "sprinkler that covers the whole garden."

While the revolving arm sprinkler appears to cover an area very evenly, our tin can test indicates its tendency to create wet and dry circles.

The effect is easily noted in late summer when the lawn is viewed from an upper window or the roottop, and the cause is shown in the above drawing.

The revolving arm type with adjustable nozzles can be set for perfect coverage provided the area of coverage is

The oscillating sprinkler is the one most commonly seen today. Movement is provided hy a simple water power motor (or water wheel), through reduction gears to a crank. The crank operates linkage which converts rotary motion to oscillating motion, or backward and forward present requirements, the field may open up.

TORONTO (CP) - Houng, rather than institution buildings such as offices or schools, may be the main concern of architects in the next few years, says Jean-Louis Lalonde of Montreal, new president of the Royal A rehitectural Institute of Canada.

'The clients aren't going to be the same. Traditionally, architects have served kings and aristocrats and leaders in the corporate world. . . ,"

Until recently they have not been as concerned with organizing "the environment which exists around people."

In the cities, "we generally have managed to have decent commercial centres with generally fairly good quality.
"Now we need more quality where people live."

WANTS AWARD CHANGE

He says he would like to see the Massey awards, presented the Massey awards, presented for architectural design on behalf of the Massey Institute, go for residential projects the next time they are awarded.

Mr. Lalonde, citing growing public concern with the quality of the environment, said:

"It's all leading to a society "It's all leading to a society in which we question whether we need all the gimmicks. We might lose some of the things that have made society affluent, but we might gain something that makes it a better place to live.

"This means that the architect's training and contribution are more vital than ever.

He was replying to com-plaints of some Victoria pri-vate hospital operators that they didn't have the time and staff to fill out forms for sick and senile people.

Mrs. J. W. Rowbottom at Glenwarren private hospital said some patients don't even remember their names.

"Some of the questions are ridiculous," she said. "For example, one asked how many stillborn children they had."

She said she asked for an interviewer to come to the hospital.

Kincaid said interviewers will fill out the forms and do the research work if the private hospitals are unable to do so.

"In Vancouver some private hospitals preferred to fill in the forms of their patients," he said. "Others requested assistance and we did the work,!"

He said the census involving elderly people is important just as important as the newly born.

mewly born, "Elderly people form an important part of the population and many require social assistance," he said.

Their Only Home ... An Old Car

NEW YORK (AP) — A middle-aged couple discovered living in their car parked beside a river say they have been living there for about eight months — living mainly on steamed clems.

Chester Konarsky, 59, and his wife, 55, said they have been without a home since August, 1998, when their landlord raised their rent and they took temporary quarters on a friend's boat.

After the boat was sold, they said, they took to living in the ear, but last summer, another friend offered them a room in back of a vacant store. The store was rented in Scandinavia: here's why flying there on one plane is better than two.

All airlines have a legal luggage allowance. And just about every Atlantic passenger we've ever seen takes full advantage of it.

And that's fair enough. Anything you can legally carry means less to cram into those already overflowing suitcases, right?

Which is OK until you have to start carting it all around airports, transferring from one plane to another, one terminal to the next.

With Atlantic 71, once you're on, you're on till Copenhagen...your seat is yours all the way.

The other ways, through places like Montreal or New York involve changing planes, transfer hassles, waiting around—and carrying that luggage with you every inch of the way.

We're convenient. Because we offer same plane Western Arrow service direct to Scandinavia this

BALLOON TAKES WINGS FOR 200-MILE TRIP

LONDON (UPI) - Melissa Lackersteen, 5, watched her balloon disappear into the sky near Heathrow Airport, hoping it would end up a good distance away so she could win a charity balloon

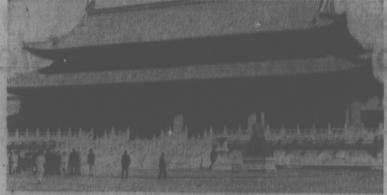

An hour later she received a telephone call from Liverpool saying her balloon with a tag containing her name, address and telephone number had made the 200-mile journey safely.

The caller said it had caught on a plane leaving Heathrow and was found intact when the craft landed at Liverpool.

"There is a $12 prize to the person whose ballon goes farthest," said Melissa's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Lackersteen, "and now were hoping to

Their combined weight is roughly eight is nothing on his fascinating wife, Chiang Ching. Nor do the volumes contain an entry on Want Kuang-mei, the equally fascinating wife of Liu Shao-chi, who was relegated to oblivion along with her husband by Mao's monumental purge. weight is roughly eight pounds. But they contain the most exhaustive collection of NOT UP-TO-DATE Absent as well are details of the fate of the many Chinese leaders who disappeared in the course of the tumultuous Cultural Revolution, A good many of those details are now available in the piles of Red Guard journals published between 1966 and 1968. information currently available about places and people in a land that must, to North Americans, seem to be a vast blur.

The Biographic Dictionary is not a Who's Who of arid data, but a series of carefully researched, readable essays that bestow human reality on more than 400 Chifnese Communist leaders known mainly to newspaper readers as unpronounceable names.

CLASHES WITH FATHER

The entry devoted to Mao Tse-tung, though only 11 do µ b le-column pages in length, is a case in point. In addition to narrating the basic details of his extraordinary life, it proves some insight into the factors that shaped his personality and his ideology.

Succinctly described, example, are Mao's early clashes with his stern father, clashes with his stern father, which a few specialists felt was a root cause of his later revolutionary career. Also described are his struggles for power against his internal Communist party rivals over the years, which put into perspective the Cultural Revolution, his recent and probably final effort to climinate his political adversaries.

One facet of Mao's experience, underlined in the Biographic Dictionary, was his remarkable capacity far survival through some of the stormlest decades in modern history. His second wife, his cyclopedic details on such ancient sites as Loyang, the capital of the Chou dynasty in the 8th century B.C., and the celebrated Ming tombs outside Peking. The book's maps are so good that an American raised in China was able to spot the place where he played as a child in Nanking, the capital under the Nationalists. Included among the maps, for those who cherish esoterica, is a chart, of the Peking bus routes. You take the No. 33 to the Fragrant Hills.

NAMES DIFFERENT stormiest decades in modern history. His second wife, his sister and one of his brothers were executed by Chiang Kaishek's Nationalists. Another brother died fighting as a guerrilla. His oldest son, a pilot, was killed in action during the Korean War. The Biographic Dictionary records with some delicacy that Mao "set up housekeeping" with his present mate. Chiang Ching, after his third wife went off to the Soviet Union for medical treatment in 1937.

SOURCES INTERVIEWED Donald Klein is a research associate at Columbia Uni-versity, and Anne Clark was formerly a China specialist in the U.S. state department. the U.S. state department. Besides consulting a massive array of literature in Chinese, English and Russian, they interviewed scores of sources who were personally familiar with their subjects. Thus Chen Yi, the Chinese foreign minister, comes through as a man of considerable intel-ligence and wit who is fond of good food, poetry and chess.

The Biographic Dictionary also reveals that Huang Hua, the new Chinese ambassador to Canada, is keenly interested in Western toys and games. The authors even manage to breathe a bit of life into the enigmatic Lin Piao, who emerged during the Cultural Revolution as Mao's successor. Regarded by toth his comrades and his enemies as a brilliant military strategist, Lin is cited as having disclosed the secret of his success to the American writer Nym Wales. "We never engage the enemy," he explained, "unless we are certain of victory."

Covering as it does the Covering as it does the years until 1965, the Biographic Dictionary does not include many of the Chinese Communist figures who came to the fore during the Cultural Revolution. Except for a brief reference to her in Mao's biography for example, there

The Guide, a French product, was begun following the establishment of diplomatic relations between France and Communist China in 1964. At that time, some 70 French students and teachers were invited to China under a cultural exchange arrangement. Permitted to travel extensively in the days before the Cultural Revolution, they pooled their notes and, under the direction of Marcel (Grand, a France, precipility on the direction of Marcel Girard, a French specialist on China, spawned a book that is impressive not only for its contents but because it is the only one of its species. The sole flaw in the Guide for the potential North American traveller to China is that it employs the French rather than familiar Wade-Gilles transcriptions of Chines e. Hence Mao Tee-tung is Mao Ze Dong and Sinkiang, if you ever reach that remote region, is Xin Jiang.

BEAL PEOPLE So, after spending five years putting together their Biographic Dictionary, Klein and Clark may feel compelled to commit another five years to bringing it forward. Still, as long as the present generation of Chinese rulers are alive, the Biographic Dictionary will be invaluable.

BEAL PEOPLE

But even if you never get to China, let alone Sinkiang or Xin Jiang, perusing the Gulde and the Biographic Dictionary is a t least a vicarious pleasure. For they serve to remind us, as the U.S. pingpong players discovered that there are real places and people in that country whose existence we are only just If the biographical volumes are indispensable for identifying the Chinese leadership, Nagel's Encyclopedia Guide is indispensable for indentifying China's geography. ROME (WP) — With the leparture of nearly all its 200 residents — many leaving its thores for the first time in heir lives — Italy's Acolian sland of Filueudi i has tequired the dublous distinction of ranking among the east-loved islands in the world.

Remaining on this craggy 10-mile spit of volcanic land, which has no roads or electric lights and only one telephone, are the local doctor (already packed to go), two or three-liders on their deathbeds, 15 Sicilian Mafia chiefs who have just been deported there, and 500 soldiers and policemen serving as their "angeli custodi" or guardian angels.

Inasmuch as these representatives of the law can't wait to go home, and the 15 Maia chiefs say they would much rather go to jail than stay where they are, Fill-cudi's popularity rating would seem to be hitting zero.

Until calamity struck a few days ago, the contrary was true. Fill-cudi, fourh in size among the islands of the Aeolian archipelago (which include Lipari, Vulcano, Stromboli, Fanarea) and hopelessly behind the others sconomically, was beginning to catch up.

hopelessiy bearing the others sconomically, was beginning to catch up.

Two small hotels and four modest b u s in e s s e s had opened, local fishermen had whitewashed their cottages to take in roomers, and tourists willing to brave a six-hour trip by steamer from Sielly were starting to wander in.

What drove is landers from that these tourists would turn right around again at the sight of 15 Mafia desperados and their 500 armed escorts. When all else falled — urgent appeals to the authorities, barricades at the port, fistights and at least one bared harpoon — the inhabitants abandoned the island in a mass vowing never to return until the capo Mafiosi were gone.

ANOTHER ISLAND

Sheltering now on the nearby island of Lipari, the refugees may soon be joined by fellow-Acolians from the island of Linosa, where 18 other Mafia chiefs were forcibly disembarked only a week before. The Linosans, already up in arms, are threatened now with a 17th unweicome Mafia guest, the notorious Joe Adonis.

Founder of Murder, Incorporated, and fingered by the late U.S. Sen. Estes Kefsuver as "the most simister gangster of them all." Adonis was deported to Italy from the U.S. in 1956. In Milan, where he has lived for some years, he is believed to he up to his ears in gambling rackets, crooked betting, slot-machines, prostitution, and the international drug traffic. On the se grounds, the ministry of the interior in Rome has just "suggested" that Milanase authorities should deport him to Linosa.

The legal basis for these massive deportations is Article 233 of the Italian penal code. It provides that a ludge may, in the case of particular

MORE DEPORTATIONS
Although the state has made fairly liberal use of this legal instrument before—there being no other recourse when the courts are too intimidated to act against Mafia leaders—it has been many years since Italy has had anything like the present crackdown.

had anything like the present crackdown.

Apart from the Mafia chiefs already rounded up, many others are in line for deportation. And 20 in the highest Mafia echelons, including the fearsome Genen Russo, Frank Coppola and Angelo La Barbera, have just been indicted by a Roman judge for "criminal association."

Problem: What to Do With Those Old Papers White. Newspapers will be collected if put in cans. Two couns are allowed per house hold per week.

Saanich alderman Edith Young said a new bylaw coming into effect July lat will allow incinerator burning until 10 a.m. In case you're wondering what to do with this newspaper after you've read it:
Waste paper may be disposed of through municipal garbage collection services and incinerator burning.

Organizations such as the Boy Scouts, Salvation Army and Goodwill are no longer taking newspaper because of marketing difficultities. The papers were previously sold to two recycling plants — one in Port Angeles which closed in January, and one in Burnaby which gets enough paper from the mainland.

paper from the mainland.

In Victoria incinerator burning is allowed with a permit from the fire chief. However, city council is at present considering a by-law that would ban all incinerator burning during June, July and August, and allow only burning of leaves and foliage during the rest of the year.

NO LIMIT Victoria deputy engineer W.

M. Jorgensen said that householders can get rid of paper waste by placing it along with their other garhage in cans. There is no limit to the number of garbage cans that will be picked up from residences picked up from residences provided that they are standard size and properly filled.

In the other three municipalities, incinerator burning and mixing paper with other garbage for collection are allowed.

In Oak Bay burning is allowed on weekdays and Saturday, but forbidden on Sundays and holidays, said

However, he said he agreed safety features should have been in cars "long ago."

Is pleased to announce the opening of an office for the practice of his profession.

THE DOCTOR AND THE BOARD

To Benefit 'Silence' Fee Not Deductible

A few months ago, the Tax Appeal Board heard and decided a somewhat unique case. The result, as well as highlighting a defect in our tax law, should be noted by business as well as self-employed taxpayers.

Apart from some inconsist-encies and other omissions which marred the taxpayer's case, a simplified version of the facts reveals a classical dilemma for the genuinely injured taxpayer, where the law permits no relief from its rigidity.

The taxpayer was a doctor, just starting out to earn a reputation as a surgeon. He had been developing a special operating technique to be used in relieving spinal dis-

eventually brought him into conflict with the tax authori-

He decided to pay financial support to the patient. Each year he paid her enough to live on and treated the payments as wages.

Whether or not she actually did any work in the office is unclear, but there was no doubt that the money was not really paid out for work done. It was paid, to put it some-what crudely, as "conscience" money, or as a fee for her whatever his real reason for making the payments, they continued for 10 years, and he claimed the deduction each year. The tax authorities examined the transaction and levied an assessment, claiming not only the tax but ing not only the tax, but interest on the unpaid tax and penalties as well for misrep-

Again the taxpayer anguished over whether or not he should fight the assessment, since a public trial would draw strention, to his original professional failure.

However, by this time, his career had been established and his record of success in his area of medicine so well proven that he felt he could risk the disclosure.

At the tax trial, the govern-At the tax trial, the government argued, quite correctly, that the law only permits one to deduct from his income, for tax calculation purposes, those expenses that are directly and necessarily laid out to earn income. One may not deduct personal or living expenses, or expenses of a capital nature. capital nature.

The doctor claimed the expense was incurred, almost as an insurance premium, in order to protect his reputation earning income.

The Tax Appeal Board ruled that, regardless of any sympathy it might feel in such cases, its hands were bound by the rigidity of the

Even if the court believed patient were absolutely necessary to protect his repu-tation, that would not make them deductible expenses.

"Reputation" of a professional practitioner is like "goodwill" to a businessman. Both are intangible capital assets. Expenses incurred by a taxpayer in building or protecting capital assets are specifically made non-deduct-ible under the present income tax law.

Thus it would appear the board properly upheld the substantial tax assessment against the doctor.

But that's not really the point. It is generally expected that. Finance Minister Edgar Benson's upcoming tax reform bill will change the law in this respect.

There are too many similar inequities under present law: Payments made to a black-mailer, losses arising from embezdement, payment made to get out of a bad deal, and many, many comparable exenditures are not deductible. penditures are not deductible presently, and the law should be updated in this respect.

But even when the reforms arrive there will always be inadvertent pitfalls where morally, though not legally, a taxpayer should be granted relief.

The tax law contains provisions which allow the courts a descretion to-levy a tax even though there is no specific provision to justify the tax.

It would therefore seem It would therefore seem appropriate that the new tax laws should contain a provision that where a court feels the law creates an undue hardship on a taxpayer, the court in such extreme circumstances, can waive the law and grant relief to the VANCOUVER - You can lead a computer a long way these days, but you can't make it think.

At least not the one they say is running things at ImpoExpo 71—the fifth B.C. Internation Trade Fair in Vancouver until June 12.

With its Univac electronic whiz, ImpoExpo claims to be the first computerized trade fair in North America. Just ask it anything about the fair and get a print-out reply instanter, the fair folks said.

We asked, ignoring the fact that just then the thing tried to ingest its own print-out paper, chewing the edges ragged before the keyboard operator got back in control. "Ask it where the press room is," suggested Ken Romaine of the Globe and

"Gosh, I don't know if it's programmed for that," the girl replied, thumbing uncertainly through her nevers.

She fired off a few nu bers. The machine was bright enough to shoot some back, but it didn't look like directions to the press room or anywhere else.

we asked the girl, intending to come by later to see what Univac came up with.

"I go off at six," she replied.

For instance, India has, an electronics industry and ex-ports heavy equipment and machines besides the rich silks, handcrafts and tea we have always known about.

And whoever put the Indian display to gether was an artist.

Many of the booths and pavilions claim attention on aesthetic grounds in addition to the appeal of products.

Even the traditional heavy machinery from Britain has been set up under bright lights and with power on to show, for example how an automated unit can turn out impact extrusions or lathe-turned machine parts. People lined up to see how they work and to get plastic samples.

The fair is designed to offer something for most tastes — general public and profes-sional buyer alike — from fine cameras and optical equipment, to arts and crafts, industrial tools, stunning crystal and table settings, wines, foods, clothing, bikes, books and automobiles.

A truck or car goes to a raffle winner daily, and enter-tainment is staged nightly in the Collseum.

It was refreshing after whirlwind tour to go back to the computer booth where Univac was humming quietly.

They are saying "Goodbye Mr. Chips" at University School. Reg Wenman, 67, is retiring after 46 years of devoted service to the school and a virtual lifetime of fair play in sport.

A distinguished master, and sportsman, he will not easily be forgotten. Nor should his contribution to youth and sport be dismissed lightly.

This is being stated as one-man's opinion. But unquestionably it is shared by hundreds of others. Perhaps thrusands of those who know him, or whose lives he has helped to shape.

For in his more than half.

helped to shape.

For in his more than half a century here, 59 years to be exact, first as a pupil at University School, then a master; at war, and in peace; on the playing field, and as an adviser, Reg Wenman has earned an undeniable measure of esteem. It has been said that as a teacher he was scholarly without being stuffy. He was straight down the line with no grey areass, said another schoolteacher, Ernie Teagle, who was taught by him, and who played sports with him.

As an athlete, he was brilliant, without being overbearing, and many still hold the haunting suspicion that he could have been a standout in almost any sport he chose.

As a gentleman, and an educator, he inspired a respect that has lasted and will long endure. Former students are flying in from all over the nation for tonight's retirement function.

As a sportsman, he had a genuine enthusiasm for games people play. He performed with an easy grace and confidence that was the envy of all. He was a name player in three sports — English rugby, field hockey, and cricket. And rarely indeed could it be said that his repute exceeded his accomplishment. In all three he obviously was supreme. He was selected for several rep rugby sides, was nominated in field hockey as the player of the half century in Canada, but in cricket he found his true love.

"Ree was a remarkable person." said Bert Builer, who played rugby with him, and against him. Competively, he was "just terrific — and one of the finest who ever came out of Victoria."

Buller explained. He would never take unfair advantage of a player on another team. He would never continue with a tackle, at all costs, if he thought his opponent might suffer

"Actually, Reg was more British than British," Buller

There was a note from the past, loo, which may explain his rugby talents. The news story said, in part . . . "Wenman . . . who, by sheer trickery, beat three men, throwing three dummies, two sidesteps, and a swerve . . . to score a

A former All-Canadian, Brian Hunnings, commented:
"Reg was an absolutely great fellow whose hidden talent was his kicking ability."

But if Reg was a standout on the rugby field, as a cricketer he was far more proficient. He was one half of the great batting partnership of the late 20s and early 30s. He and Pat Sparks were "automatic" opening battsmen of Victoris and B.C. representative sides for years, and hard to put down too. Both played for Canada, Wenman catching out the great Don Bradman in a match against Australia.

Stiff, as a star, he was always considerate of the Still, as a star, he was always considerate of the woomer, even an opponent. "No, he wouldn't haby the vice, who was facing him at bat for the first time." Torn novice, who was facing him at bat for the first time." Tom McKenchie recalled. "Rather he'd try to force you to meet the challenge. It was his creed that if a player pushed harder, then he would play better.

"But with Reg." McKeachie went on. "It was no giveway. You knew exactly where you stood — and everything you scored off him, you earned — believe me."

If Reg falled in any test in life, only the Canadian Army, the Reasure when he went oversees he was retriefly.

knows why. Because when he went overseas, he was actually over-age for combat dufy. But he wanted in. Aha, though the Army, we'll send him to the battle school at Barnard's Castle in Yorkshire, where they separated the men from the boys,

They did, and Reg ran the instructors into the ground, and got a "D" — a distinguished mark for the course. He was highest in his class. Alas, they put him in the divisional educational office, his biggest disappointment.

In latter years, Reg fought off tuberculosis in a three-

In latter years, keg fought off tuberculosis in a three-year blut, was slowed down by a troublescene groin injury, and has battled to at least a draw with arthritis. It has been a distressing sight, but a femiliar one, in more recent yers, to see Reg, his body racked with nein-pritting his teeth, and getting on with the j-th. He would never refuse to show an eager student, or a rank novice, how to hold a bat, or take a pass. Even though every moment perhaps was asony.

Perhaps was agony.

Last night, there was a cocktail party in his honor.

utting the Brakes on Technology

By DAVID DUNSMUIR

Lewis Mumford, whose social criticism has been persuasive bu remarkably gentle over the past 50 years, adds a cutting edge to scholarship in his latest work.

The Pentagon of Power is an atreme view of the miscarriage of chonology. Such extremiam must be onsidered a virtue, goading humanity ito changing direction while it's still Paths of history, from this stand-point, have led to "collective obsessions and compulsions . . . and undermined our capacity to lead full and spiritually satisfying lives." Man is unmaking himself by imposing a mechanistic order where, by his own definitions, he will not helong.

In keeping with testy remarks about leak-proof vaults within the physical and behavioral sciences, Mumford define classification.

fies classification.

All human activities yield grist for Supersage. He leaps millenia at a single bound, fusing the magic of the Pyramid Age and the mystique of space exploration with a glance from his x-ray eyes. Who else rould dismiss as "callow" a superscientist portrait of man by Buckminster Fuller and make the description stick?

The "perfect environment" (another Fullerism) symbolizes the antiseptic bleakness of one future. Each individual would be seeded into his own detachable space capsule. It would serve every life-function in sequence, beginning as a crib and automated schoolroom and ending as a coffin — or a box of spare parts. True perfection is reached, presumably, when all parts can be used

Standardized perts and tightly pre-dictable results are features of today's "megatechnics," a closed system where Mumford believes the machine itself dictates human goals, Mass production requires mass consumption, which depends upon standardized expectations depends upon standardized expectations, increases probability and decreases possibility. Progress is marked by the reduction of a fallible human element. But the outcome of a mechanical operation is essentially known before the operation is set in motion; feedback and self-correction cannot equal the speculative leaps of the human mind. The potential of any closed system, momatter how sophisticated, falls far short of the potential that lies in the interacting minds of a great city, "Polytechnics," the diversified craft-

based technology swamped by the profitmaking imperatives of the Industrial Revolution, tended to support man's subjective goals, not supplant them.

Mumford points to the polytechnical concept of 'leisure' as ane indicator of the way in which man's place in the world picture has been transformed.
Leisure was freedom within work—
time to improvise, to speculate, to talk with fellow-craftsmen — rather than freedom from work. The concept of progress was less single-minded, too.
An earlier volume, Technics and Human Development, dredged prehistory for the origins of the myth of the machine.

Physical evidence of early man's tools has ability to make and use tools has overshadowed proof of other attributes that helped to form the human constellation: the ability to abstract from experience, to communicate perceptions, to explore through fantasy and assert through ritual. By allowing these impulses to be stifled, man fits neatly into the "pentagon of power" at the cost of both mind and spirit.

The new book's title relates to more than the U.S. military establishment, though Mumford explains in passing why Vietnamese polytechnics have frustrated the power of the Pentagon. His pentagon of power is an alliterative abstraction — five concerns that interweave to brutalize life and despoil nature for the greater glory of the megamachine:

· Power itself, as usable energy, is Political control needs such power as a source of wealth and (especially from nuclear sources) a means of coercion.

Productivity has become ruthless exploitation,

• Profits are sought as massive short-term returns.

Publicity inflates the image of the directors of the power complex — the military, bureaucratic, industrial, and scientific elite — to bolster the authority of their decisions.

These factors, to varying degrees, have always been involved in shaping events. Once merely parts of a restraining ecosystem within which man and other organisms had their being, they now dominate the system. In fact, they are the system.

Jacques Ellul, perhaps the gloomiest technology-watcher of them all, com-pares man's function in today's society pares man's function in today's society with that of a coin in a slot machine, initiating the process without taking part in it. Decisions are based on the quantified analysis and aimed at the quantified progress that the power complex demands; on these terms qualitative judgment withers and is replaced by the efficiency of the computer.

Mumford does not agree that the drift is irreversible. Scientific development in relatively few directions chosen for speedy gains in profit or prestige is increasingly being questioned as an acceptable definition of progress. The drop-outs reflect the problem. The ecologists suggest an answer to it.

realization that man will destroy his planetary household if he cannot cope with his domestic affairs.

Mumford refers to a model for this redeeming world view — the biological studies of Charles Darwin little more than a century ago.

Darwin's work on the evolution of organisms within the great web of life is compared with the methods and conclusions of Isase Newton and his heirs, whose devotion to the sun as a symbol of cosmic order blinded them to the presence of life within the clock-

Variations on the theme recall a much earlier age when the Sun God was also in the ascendant. Mumford strikes also in the ascendant. Mumford strikes a dazzling correspondence between modern society and that of the fourth millenium before Christ, when the first megamachine imposed absolute regimentation on its human components.

The organization men in the Egyptian priesthood devoted their human-powered machine to the building of the pyramids—static rockets that conferred a spurious immortality. Today's scientific priesthood, equally aloof, gears the machine to the building of manned rockets—mobile tombs that promise existence of a sort while "life support" lasts. The social results are the same; diversion of attention and resources from problems at ground level.

In its earlier form, Mumford says, the megamachine was doemed to collapse, but the revised version may be more pervasive.

The prototype could be held together only by a profound magico-religious faith in the system. Its mechanized human parts had avenues of escape from total state control. Decisions proved fallible; consent was withdrawn when the magic became discredited. Rebellion and passive disobedience disclosed the system's built-in flaws: its rigidity, its lack of rational purpose, its repression of initiative.

Maintenance of faith in the present manustrance of faith in the present system is the main goal of public relations, a field solemnly defined by one leading practitioner as "the engineering of consent." Escape from the system is difficult, though escapism within it is easy. The flaws remain, by definition.

Mumford offers perceptive comments on the significance of youth's urge to escape from a machine-conditioned reality. Student movements have become world-wide because, he believes, ruling ideologies do not affect the common base of protest: dismay over man's thingification and his arrogant managers, whose techniques lead to disaster. lead to disaster lead to disaster.

Drop-outs do their best to ignore the tainted products of the system, as if the world had already suffered its expected nuclear devastation. They live hand to mouth with no plans except survival and no satisfactions except the joy of being together. By adopting a nerve-end existence at least they know where their heads are.

Though Mumford deplores their indiscriminate rejection of the past, he sees a rebirth of wisdom in their stress on the value of human associations and Others show an equally keen awareness of interdependence. Differing objectives (urban self-help, conservation, ecumenism), cluster on one organic stem. Their flowering depends on whether the megamachine can be dismantled and its energies used for the affirmation of life rather than concepts. affirmation of life rather than conquest

Any summary tends to make Mumford's work seem trite, hysterical, and simplistic.

No review lacking the sheer heft of

No review lacking the sheer hell of the combined volumes 750 pages could do justice to the broad sweep of his analysis, or to the fiery conviction of his style. There is no more important subject than the one he has pursued throughout a life filled with honors and moved by dignity and compassion. The times may now be in step with him.

SOME THOUGHTS OF MUMFORD

"As for the eventual assemblage of a completely automated world society, only innocents could contemplate such a goal as the highest possible culmination of human evolution. It would be a final solution to the problems of mankind, only in the sense that Hitler's extermination program was a final solution for the 'Jewish problem'."

"The only true multi-medium remains the human organism itself."

"Mankind is now in process of changing its quarters only by moving to a modern wing in the same archaic prison whose foundations were laid in the Pyramid Age: better ventilated and more sanitary, with a pleasanter outlook — but still a prison, and even more difficult to escape from than ever before because it now threatens to incarcerate a much larger part of the human race."

"Empty afflluence, empty idleness, empty excitement, empty sexuality, are not the occasional vices or misfortunes of our machine-oriented society but its boasted final products."

"A culture that boasts of its uncontrollable dynamism is in a state of nightmarish disintegration, and before man throws off that nightmare the very bed in which one sleeps, the earth itself, may disappear like any other disposable container.

"The gates of the technocratic prison will open automatically, despite their rusty ancient hinges, as soon as we decide to walk out."

THE OCTOBER CRISIS:

Casual Deceit and Smug Conceit

Canadians saw this book take shape on the nation's television screens. Fabrique Nationale rifles at the ready, strange looking troops in American-style helmets walked the streets of Montreal and the gardens of Rockliff.

the gardens of Rockifff.

Most English-Canadians applauded the War Measures Act which made the production possible. To do less meant being labelled a "bleeding heart" by our prime minister, or slightly worse, internment by the RCMP.
Now that the immediate crisis has receded, voices of criticism can be heard in this sometimes somnolent land.

No one could call Ron Haggart and ubrey Golden "bleeding hearts" or radicals, laggart writes one of the toughest, farranging columns in Canada for the conserva-tive Toronto Telegram while Golden is a lawyer interested in civil rights.

As a team they wrote and researched a thorough book, although it is not without faults. I had the feeling it was a compendium of fragmenta which I had read or seen before. No intimate detail or revelations shed

But that's better than newspapers pro-

Stat that's better than newspapers provided their readers during the October crisis.

The authors point out that almost all Canadian editorial pages, Liberal or Conservative, went down the line with the government on the WMA.

(The Victoria Times, Le Devoir, and the Toronto Star were among the few newspapers to question imposition of the WMA.)

Of 400 Duebeers detained under the

Of 490 Quebecers detained under the WMA, all but 55 were released without being charged, yet the word "arrest" was universally used to describe their plight.

Those Guilty Feelings

Haggart and Golden claim detention without arrest, in the absence of specific complaints, is really internment.

"The press universally avoided the word because it carries the pejorative implication of the detention of persons by class, i.e. enemy aliens."

If the authors are correct, we can only conclude the newspapers did not want to bring up all those guilty feelings about what we did to Japanese-Canadians during the Second World War.

Twice in less than 30 years the WMA has proven a handy political tool for politicians looking for an easy way out.

Even that paragon of subjective objective ty, The Canadian Press, gets a cuff for its reporting. Good old CP breathlessiy said that "nearly 10,000 sticks of dynamite have been stolen in Quehec so far this year..."

Checking the facts in less explosive times

Haggart and Golden found that only 6,700 sticks had disappeared in the preceding 22 months, and at least some of it was bootlegged to small contractors and farmers with fields full of stumps.

Grounds for arrest in the majority of Grounds for arrest in the maynry of cases, the authors state, were, "radicalism, objectionable to some but legal nonetheless, and opposition to government policies."

Strong stuff, but the record supports the argument.

And then there was the "provisional government plot," first publicized by the Toronto Star with the headline, "Plan to supplent Quebec government caused Ottawa"

Thestory's nucleus was a supposed plot by Le Devoir editor Claude Ryan and other leading French-Canadians to take over Quebec if the Bourassa government collapsed.

What appeared in the Star, according to What appeared in the Star, according to the authors, was "a grotesque contortion" of an experience Claude Ryan had two weeks previous to the Star story.

In the midst of the crisis Ryan had requested an audience with Luclen Saulnier, chairman of Montreal's executive committee, and the power behind Drapeau's throne.

In the ensuing one-hour conversation Ryan suggested as one of three proposals, "that if the terrorism escalated and if the government was unable to cope, a leader such as Rene Levesque should be installed."

From what Ryan has told the authors this thought was simply a speculative suggestion, and the elaboration of an idea discussed by Le Devrir's editorial board.

The book has its own share of speculation: "Were members of the government helping "Were members of the government helping to spread rumors . . . (1) to discredit Claude Ryan, a leading Trudeau critic in Quebec and (2) to provide a romantic ex post facto justification for the WMA?"

Nobody's talking, least of all the govern-ment. Remember the lofty rhetoric of Justice Minister John Turner early in the crisis?:

"It is my hope that some day the full details of the intelligence upon which the government acted can be made public, because until that day comes, the people of Canada will not be able to fully appreciate the course of action taken by the government."

Such noxious paternalism is hard to swallow. But the official opposition, and some provincial governments, did not experience any lumps in their throats.

Assured of alternative legislation to the WMA within a month, the Conservatives supported the WMA. supported the WMA.

Haggart and Golden comment: "The end result was that the Tories failed to get a single comma changed in the regulations their leader said were 'dangerous' and 'a important they failed in what is usually the opposition's function: to create the issues the

Domestic Purposes

Local readers will appreciate the author's acute perceptions:

"The order-in-council was designed more for domestic political purposes in B.C. than for the maintenance of law and order. Many members of the B.C. cabinet had over the years criticized the 'socialist ideas' they leared were spread in the classroom."

It is the easual deceit governments employed in using the WMA for their own purposes and the smug conceit with which English-Canadians accepted the legislation that is frightening.

Persons detained under the WMA were not

Persons detained under the WMA were not fully informed why they had been interned. Thus, some incriminated themseives in subsequent interrogations, because they "c-uid not have known of the new law which made innocent views and associations on October 15, a crime on the very next morning."

Retroactive crime is weathy of a Kaffa.

Retroactive crime is worthy of a Kafka plot although one does not expect it from Canadian governments. Or as George Orwell prophetically put it: "In our time political sneech and writing are largely the defence of the indefensible."

Less urbane, but none the less true, Haggart and Golden have the last word: "There is only one kind of country in which people go to jail without suspicion of crime."

Hope to Despair And Back Again

By JUDITH YEMEN

At least once in your life you will experience the deep anguish and remorse of failure in a relationship with another person.

He could be a child, friend or lover, you could have been simply neglectful, non-understanding or over-intrusive. The result is the same; you feel pain for the pain you feel pain for the pain you have caused in another.

Jean Beattie, successful Tobehaving in the fashion of TV characters. For self-protection he avoids saying anything unless forced to do so. Then he speaks only about garden-ing, and only by analogy.

When the president asks him what he thinks of the state of the economy. Chance answers, "In a garden, growth has its season. There are spring and summer, but there are also fall and winter. And they spring and summer.

And then spring and summer again. As long as the roots are not severed, all is well and all will be well."

magazine articles and proad-cast scripts of how a mid-night thief led her to become involved with a Toronto street gang, the Saints. But this time around, she has bound it all together into a highly personalized book, And The Tigger Leaps Tiger Leaps

It's not a do-good book and shouldn't be approached with the idea you will find uplifting deeds to contemplate. Bather, it is a book about failure, the kind you agonize over because you swear you'll do hetter next time.

Briefly, the story centres around Miss Beattle and a group of ex-delinquents. She is attacked in her own apartment by a thief, and discovers when the police solve the crime that the thief was a young boy.

How was she, as a member of society, to blame for this and all will be well."

That blows the president's mind. It's so . so . salient, so . . It'u s . The president quotes Change during his next speech, and the media hunt for this mysterious new economic seer is on.

Kosinski's prose is so simple it resembles newswriting. No minor characters are developed. The plot relies completely upon the reader's understanding of the irony in Chance's position.

The story obviously is a contemporary metaphor for the myth of the fall of man. The unbroken cycle of nature and the pure images of TV remain Chance's only guides as he wanders through the chaos outside.

His personality is composed of pure images and a prelit crate understanding of nature. In a world of war, poliution, inflation and unemployment, Chance's simplicity is irresistably attractive.

Last year McDonald saw more than 700 movies. Does he like movies?

"No, not really, it's a job, you know; as soon as you accept the responsibility the ennul wears off and you do it," he said in a recent interview.

That lacklustre revelation shouldn't be taken at face value, for once McDonald stops talking about his job and starts talking about movies, he sounds just as animated as any other film buff — with his own set of favorite movies, favorite actors, directors and miscellaneous anecdotes.

McDonald is a quiet, sensible man, full of moral and esthetic contradictions about films which suggest that although censorship may be a ridiculous exercise, he's as well-suited as anyone could be to fill that $11,340 per year slot in the attorney-general's department.

McDonald's authority rests in the provisions of B.C's in the provisions of B.C's Motion Pictures Act of 1970. This act replaced an earlier one from 1913 and revised the one from 1913 and revised the work of film censorship to that of classification. He is the sole arbiter of what we see and what we don't, but his decisions can be appealed. Few are,

McDonald denies he's a censor and insists his work is simply a form of giving advice to people who don't go

The shift from censorship to (classification means fewer movies zet edited. Last year McDonaid cut only 18 films. Compared with 10 years ago, he says, this is a small figure.

"We try not to ruin the continuity of a film. There are yery few things that can't be shown if they work into the story."

McDonaid says he can't spell out a set of rules or principles which guide him. The Act sets the three classification categories, but says nothing about how these classifications shall be determined.

"We're in the midst of a terrific intellectual revolution and it doesn't touch only motion pictures, he says. "We're just trying to survive, as it were. Normalcy is gone. "Politics, religion, you name it, everything is in a complete uproar. The classifications I put on the films are really labels. They're designed to inform you."

So me people, McDonald said, need all the information they can get. Although he freely admits that a "rethe government's part? After, all, adults ought to be left to thomselves to make up their

His favorite movies? An Italian comedy called Bell Antonio, the great western High Noon and Stalag 17.
Does he think movies are better today that 10, 20 or 30, years ago? The techniques have improved, he says, but television has cornered the market for family movies. The result has been a gap in good family screen entertainment.

Up From Poverty To Irascibility

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Carlotta Monti once mused to W. C.
Fields:
"I wonder which means more to you—the drinks or me."
The comedian replied to his mistress: "Each has its position of relative importance in the household."
That typically Fieldsian gesture of unsentimentality is be ported in a new book, W. C.
Fields and Me, which Miss Monti wrote with Cy Rice. It is a remarkably frank and revealing account of 14 years in the household of the comedian.

Christmas Day, 1946, his wife and son claimed the body and the estate,

They never married, for the simple reason that Fields still had a wife; he had married early in his career, fathered a son, parted, and never was divorced.

Fields and Miss Monti met on a movie set when she was a singing starlet. On the fourthight she visited his home and he remarked in typical fashion:

"I'm not going to spread as the state gave her $50 s week for 10 years. She writes that she went from job to job until she landed her present employment at Technicolor. For memories she rides around in Fields's 1938 Cadillac, the only tangible evidence of her 14 years with an accentric genius.

he remarked in typical fashion:

"I'm not going to spread a handkerchief and get down on one knee before you, because my arthritis might hurt when I got up, But I have something important to ask. . . Come live with me."

When she protested that she had her career to think of, he melted her with a simple phrase; "I need you."

She agreed to stay. Rarely again did she ever hear such tenderness.

"You are never to leave me," he warned her, "or I'll have you

he warned her, "or I'll have you drawn and quartered."
Field's parsimony was extreme, reflecting his boyhood of poverty. He allowed his rented mansions to crumble, refusing to repair a house that someone else own ed. He continually tested Miss Monti's honesty, planting cash around the house to see whether it would disappear figurative works.

A Love of Clutter

Gordon Rice opened this past week at The Print Gallery. The show is characterized by the artist's love for florid clutter. S m a l l , undistinct forms are organized to create interiors, landscape and non-figurative works.

There are examples of work done, throughout the artist's career. Some date back several years to Gordon's student years at the University of Hawaii. As a record of the artist's growth the show is vague; the paintings, collages, and drawings have no dates and are hung with no regard for chronological

The making of paintings as a path to intellectual and moral wisdom is one of the justifications for the activity. The evidence of wisdom that individual paintings supply is only partial.

Coming after the decisions internal to each work is the decision to make yet another painting. having learned something from the previous one. The progress between works show what control the artist has over his own history and how he coaxes his history to flow naturally, history being somewhere be-tween tyrant and slave.

book creation.

That's exactly the point.
Petri could have lumbered ponderously on about how the authoritarian personality is handmaiden to fascism. But he chose to be entertaining, slightly enigmatic. He chose to leave us unsettled, suspended in partial disbelief.

He does things in his film which leave you saying, "This is absurd; he can't expect me to swallow that."

The premise of the film, that the head of internal security is a murderous sexual deviate, defies common sense. This absurdity is a perfect metaphor for the absurdity of organized fear, the fear which measures a society's instability by the number of political slogans whitewashed on city buildings.

whitewashed on city buildings.

Petri's movie is accurate and timely. Repression, dissent and terrorism are becoming facts of life in North America and Europe.

This brilliantly photographed and edited work is a harometric reading of the spirit of men who have become numbed to the facts of injustice.

The jump between each work of Gordon Rice's is uneven; some work is dissappointingly regressive. Having the artist's latest work pointed out to me, it was possible to see how it arrived possible to see how it arrived at its present form and where the artist took a wrong turn.

Early work is landscape. It is likable if not openly seductive. As paintings, they take no technical risks that were not already acceptable at the turn of the century. As visual poetry, their romanticism is over-sweet.

cism is over-sweet.
Realism is too often boring and in the slavish rendering of the subject much enthusiasm can be buried. And yet with realism aside, without some intent of recording what the artist sees and is obsessed with, painting can dissolve into an ocean of possibility; all things being possible it becomes necessary to impose limits on ones own thinking. making a realism of chosen perimeters of exploration.

Gordon Rice has found a workable compromise be-tween these two extremes. In his best work cluttered in-teriors are filled with objects whose organization and character were chosen from the artist's environment. Translated into the medium of loose paint and tube color, the observed reality synthesizes with the visual interest of pure paint and brush strokes.

Avoiding the infinite dangers

An outgroth of this clut-tered yet controlled synthesis tered yet controlled synthesis of reality and painterly elements has been Gordon's latest work. Large collages leave the needed discipline of observation behind. Matchbook covers candy bar wrappers, shreds from Eaton's catalogue. Literature, magazine advertisements have been sprayed over the surface as though fired from a machine guin. There is no marksmanship, only a pattern of misses.

With so many elements on one surface, to merely achieve visual cohesiveness requires so much effort that achieving meaningful con-ceptual relationships between selected images is beyond the limits of human patience

Control of meaning is sacrificed so the artist can continue adding more pieces with a sense of purpose analogous to killing hours working on a its-saw puzzle. Interlocking the one thousand and one pieces with visual tricks is not enough. The print media contains images, meanings, contains images, meanings, that cannot be ignored; its colored pages are not a mere palette. School Play Outdoors

An outdoor performance of Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream was presented Wednesday and Thursday on the new grounds of St. Margaret's School.

Faculty and students joined in performing the play under the direction of drama teacher Daphne Wheeler.

The setting of trees and lawns made an effective background for the characters who wore simple ancient Greek costumes.

Excepts from Mendels-sohn's Midsummer Night's Dream music was used and the school choir also con-tributed English madrigal songs which were taped for the dances.

Picnic Tickets Now Available

Complimentary tickets are available at Silver Threads Service Centennial Square centre for the annual plenic to be hold in Beacon Hill Thursday at 11:30 a.m.

Tickets are on sale for day trips to Vancouver and Stan-ley Park via Nanalmo (June 17), to Bellingham via Ana-cortes (June 24), and for the Gulf Islands round trip on July 7.

Officer Eve Bows Out...Why?

By VERNON SCOTE
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—
When "Ironside," of the top

the air next year it will be without officer Eve Whitfield played by Emmy-winner Barbara Anderson.

Barbara, a blonde with a tinkling bell voice, may be the first actress to quit a hit television show in its bloom of popularity.

Pernell Roberts and David

for greener fields that never materialized. Dennis Weaver walked away from "Gunsmoke," the longest-running drama on the tube. Bob Horton exited "Wagon Train"
at its peak.

None of the actors admitted regretting their decisions. But one seldom sees the names of Roberts, Canary or Horton adorning marquees or television series of their own.

Miss Anderson asked for her release out of fatigue.

"I underwent a serious operation last September," Barbara said, "and was back on the set in three weeks.

"Then, instead of taking its usual histus, the series began another 10 weeks of shows for next season. So I asked to be removed from the show. And that was that."

that was that."

Or was it? Barbara was growing restless on the show anyhow.

"I couldn't see where my contribution was as important as it had been in the first two years of the scries," she said. "The scripts were concentrating more and more on guest stars.

"That left the three regulars on the show — not counting Raymond Burr —

There is another factor in Barbara detaching herself from one of video's top shows. She was married to a Beverly Hills, stock broker four months ago.

"I'm settling into married life now," she said. "And we've bought a new home. And seriously, I don't misa the series. When I see the reruns it's like watching

VICTORIA DAILY NEWSPAPERS

Eager Dolphins Please Coach

After two weeks of intensive spring training, head coach Frank Hindle has decided there is nothing fishy about his Dolphins. In fact, Frank is downright optimistic over prospects that Victoria Dolphins will be contenders from the opening gun in their first season in the Big Four Canadian Junior Football League.

Hindle has been impressed by potential displayed during the first 10 workouts of the newly-formed club. Several former stars of the Vancouver Island Juvenile League, inculding quarterbacks Terry Karpluk and Pat Griffin, have sparkled in training.

Threatening to give Karpiuk and Griffin a battle for the quarterback berth is 16-year-old Greg Gardner, who has a remarkably quick release for a youngster,

Overall, Hindle has been pleased by the three signal-calling prospects, the running backs, mobility of linemen and the team's eagerness.

On the coaching staff, Garry Andrews, a former Montreal

Alouette, has replaced Rick Murphy as defensive-back coach after Murphy's transfer to Vancouver. He'll be joined by Roy Vollinger, a former Victoria Hornet, who will handle the defensive line. Ken Munro has been named team manager.

In spite of the fact that it's still extremely early in the season, sixty-five candidates have attended practices — some commuting from as far away as Nanaimo.

After watching his 65 candidates, some commuting from Nanaimo and Duncan, Hindle plans a balanced running and passing attack with a speedy squad rather than an overly large one. He feels he has an assemily of quick linemen who fit in with his plans.

Terry Kustaski, Ron Heslegrave, Dick Eldridge, Ed Avery, Don Owsianski, Ken Justice, John Edmondson and Ray Herriot all look good, he says.

Testing of the Dolphin's future, however, comes only when the season begins — with a round-rohin tournament with the four established Mainland teams at Royal Athletic Park Sunday, August 15.

'If an existing word or phrase in a new context paints colorful picture, is restricted, unusual . . .

Victoria Linguistics Professor Harry Scargill. An editor of the Dictionary of Canadianisms, Scargill says, "The basis of slang is novelty, and this is why you can't translate it any more than you can translate a metaphor,

Most dictionaries label slang words, but the dynamic nature of language will often make the designation obsolete before a reference work is published.

A rule of thumb, defining slang, according to Scargill: If an existing word or phrase used in a new context paints a colorful and is basically unusual . . . right on baby!

"When it's in general use and not restricted, then it's not, slang. If a word is overworked, it will disappear or it will fill a need."

For example "jet set" is no longer slang because it's in colorful vocabulary, Scargill says, but it's very difficult to determine how long slang stays with a language, and especially when it entered.

1898. Seventy-three years later the words have become so much a part of the language, even slang dic-tionaries describe them as 'informal.'

When a word becomes obsolete, the group employing it replaces it.

"This is the way the language is enriched, and it's a very good thing," Scargill

Some phrases such as "far out" may relate to the space age, claims the professor. Others like "nare" may be an abbreviation for the word narcotics agent or, more fascinating, "nare" may be derived from the gypsy word "pak," meaning nose.

Nak, nare or nifty, sland does not equal poor English. "It's just a new use of an existing expression in a new context," Scargill says.

A few eassettes and a small recorder will do.

"It's the obvious way to illustrate words, and it's not as difficult as it sounds," Scargill says.

Aristocratic Tours, Inc., begins by easing your way through customs, then has a hairdresser and a masseuse waiting when you're through.
A Rolls-Royce and a maid are at your service 24 hours a day, and so is a bar "for anything you want to drink, anytime."

The baroness ("you may call me Vera") visited Dallas to set up final tour details with Neiman-Marcus, which is

"There's no use getting tense when you travel," the baroness said.

So she's dressed up a continental tour that coddles the traveller in the lap of luxury. All you do is pack your moneybags and the "Meeting real British people like Hugh is the best part of our tour," said the baroness. "The main appeal is not the snob appeal, but the fact that you get to know people rather than monuments and ruins. Most of our clients don't care for sight-seeing. They've already been."

"That's the easy way to see culture," said the baroness. "You can enjoy an evening drink and look at a Gains-borough in my study. I always felt it ruined good art to take it out of the house."

Aristocrats opening their homes will insoude the Duke of Bedford and Lord Montague of Beaulieu in England, the Lord of Taraquair in Sociand, Princess Schwartzenburg in Vienna, Prince and Princess Hohenberg in Salzburg, Baron Rothschild on the Cote D'Azur, Countess Chailtot in Paris, the Begum Aga Khan in Nice, Prince Hugo Colona in Rome and "many other glittering personalities, really foremost people."

Other events include lunch with some of Paris' top couturiers, a grand opera ball in Rome, the Carnival in Venice, the Royal Ascot and a visit with the Sitwells, one of the foremost literary families in England.

"We never take more than six clients," said the Baroness: "We couldn't very well take a bus load out to Hugh's for dinner. And besides, it wouldn't be personal."

The baroness works out the many details from her London office, where she is assisted by her El-year-old daughter, Julie. Her husband, a Dutch baron, will accompany her on some of the trips.

Baroness de Vocerode is used to thinking exclusive and big when it comes to parties—she used to work for the British Railways, where on short notice she could set up a golf party in Scotland or a racing party in Monte Carlo for VIPs.

The baroness said she decided to go commercial with the sophisticated service because requests grew and grew,

She's planning 37 gracious living tours during the current year, in addition to an Australian tour "complete with kangaroo hunting" and one of the United States.

"I'm sure there are many Europeans who would like to see the real America," she said. "Besides, I have to, darling. I need the money."

Goin' Down the Road-Via the Thumb

Last week I hitchhiked from Calgary to Vancouver in two days, which isn't bad. With luck I could have done it in a day, but of the other hand it could have taken several.

acveral.

I arrived in Vancouver exhausted. This humble form of travel requires a lot of energy, not to mention patience, planning and tact.

Hitchhikers from eastern Canada told me the stretch of Trans-Canada Highway from Calgary to Revelstoke (269 Calgary to Revelstoke (289 miles) is one of the hardest parts of the country to get rides in. The main reason appears to be a simple lack of traffic, but the hostility of motorists toward transients could also be a factor.

There's a tourist car every minute or so during daylight hours, but everybody knows tourists don't pick up hitch-nours, but everybody knows tourists don't pick up hitch-hikers. And there are trucks at least every five minutes, even during the night, but truckers rarely give rides, either because it's too much trouble to stop or because of legal complications.

I stood for about three hours on the highway at Bowness on the outskirts of Calgary. Perhaps a thousand cars and trucks sped by with no sign of a ride. Paranoia began to set in. Maybe I'd be forced to spend the night here. Maybe I'd never get a ride and have to slink back into Calgary to buy a bus ticket.

Finally a camper pulled over. Its driver was a Vancouver man in his early twenties taking a leisurely drive through Alberta and the Rockies. We exchange pleasantries about life on the coast. I rolled a cigarette.

"Don't smoke that," he advised. "I've got something that's better than tobacco."

He reached into the sun visor and pulled out a little bag containing marijuana and two cigarettes.

"No thanks," I said, "Nevertouch the stuff, but you go ahead."

He dropped me off 75 miles farther on at the Banff junction. I was sorry to leave the cheerful warmth of the truck, because it was wet and cold in the mountains, where spring comes late.

I greeted 10 young people huddled under an overpass waiting for thunder showers to pass. Most were from eastern Canada, and a few had been waiting at the junction for as long as six hours. Tedious introduction to the west. But they were well-

Two youths from Calgary who were hoping to spend a weekend in the nightspots of Vancouver wore only dress slacks, I ight windbreakers and icather shoes with pointed toes.

Just as I arrived, a Banff RCMP officer, who apparantly had been patrolling past the hitchhikers all afternoon, decided to make an identification check.

"He's allowed to ask for ID," said a kid from London, Ont., "but he can't go through our stuff without a warrant. I checked it out in a civil liberties booklet."

The Mountie wrote down names and addresses, then I shouldered my dufflebag and walked about a quarter of a mile down the road, giving the others first crack at the trickie of west-bound traffic.

It soon began to rain again, but for fear of missing a ride I stayed in it rather than join the others under the overpass. I wondered why it hadn't occurred to me to bring some kind of hat.

I was well on the way to

I was well on the way to getting soaked when down the road came a small delivery truck. It stopped to pick up everyone at the overpass, then it stopped for me, and finally for a kid from Washington state. Twelve of us and our assorted gear were crammed in around the truck's cargo, two empty coffins being delivered to Lake Louise, 35 miles away. It was cold, wet and a little spooky, but at least we were moving.

Nobody seemed to know what the coffins were for, but they might have had something to do with the opening of Chateau Lake Louise that weekend. The chateau has about 650 guests when operating at capacity and a staff of some 450, most of them students. Girls outnumber boys 6-1, according to one employee who quits working as a mechanic in Toronto each summer to come west and work as a chef.

At the turnoff to Lake Louise the eastern kids decided to pack it in for the day and stay at the local hostel. I stayed on the highway for another two hours until rain and hunger drove me to find a meal at a nearby coffee shop:

Nobody in the village was sure if the hostel was open yet, and it would be a bwo-mile walk to find out. Dilemma: if there were no hostel I'd be forced to crash in a hotel, which, exorbitant rates aside, didn't seem like part of a hitchhiking trip.

I decided to take refuge in an abandoned log cabin near the highway, where at least I could stay dry. To my surprise the eabin had an old stove — without a pipe stuffed with paper and dry wood.

As soon as I got the fire going, I set to work to clean out the refuse strewn over the floor from past parties that had been held there. My idea was that If the cabin were tidy others stranded on the highway would be able to use the place.

the place.

I got so involved in my work that I didn't see the black-and-white police cruiser stop on the road outside.

"You people in that cabin get out," came the voice over the loudspeaker. "You're not supposed to be in there, so put that fire out and get on your way." your way."

Dennis died in the Eastern State Penitentiary of what doctors called "acute neeroting pancreatitis and terminal acidosis." His pancreas had e n larged because of heroin, they said.

Those who fool around with marijuane are kidding themselves, he said.

"It has been my experience over the years with other drug addicts that the greater majority of them, if not all of Dennis told his story in the studio of the Lower Bucks Cabletelevision to detectives of the Bucks Caunty district attorney's office in a Philadelphia suburb. The business of auto safety.

Auto safety is everyone's concern. But it's our And we think the attention that's being paid to auto safety now is a good thing. Because it will result in better driving for everyone. And, frankly, better driving for everyone means better business for us.

That's why we're trying to make it easy to be safe by putting in safety features that work by themselves. You don't have to do anything to make them work.

Like Side-guard beams. And the energy-absorbing steering column. And the Cargo-guard between the trunk and back seat. They start "working" even before you get in the car.

But two safety features, two of the most vital, are worthless unless you do something first. Seat and shoulder belts.

Unfastened they do nothing. And you've seen enough statistics to know what a difference they can make. So use them.

But that's not all you can do. Because the most personality with surprising economy. effective safety feature of all can't be added to our cars or anybody else's. That feature is you. And the way you drive. Which should be defensively

And rested. And sober.
We're all in this together. And together we can solve the auto safety problem once and for all. And the time is now.

Take a Firebird out for a fun drive at your Pontiac dealer's!

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER By DR. FRANK MILLER
Dear Dr. Miller: My husband feeds his hunting dog plain, dry dog food and has no problem getting the dog to eat it. But he has tried to convice me and my poodle
that dry dog food is better than canned dog food. Sylvester, my poodle, won't go along with it, not so far, anyway. Oh. I guess he would long. My question is, which is actually better for him, the canned or the dry food?-T. L.

Dear T. L.: Presuming they are both better quality foods, there may actually be little difference as far as nutrition is concerned. From the standpoint of palatability, it is true many dogs do prefer the canned food. From the standpoint of exercise for teeth and gums the dry food, fed dry, would obviously be prefer-more acceptable from the flavor standpoint but still less than the canned of compar-able quality. In households where finances are a consid-eration, the dry food is the best buy.

excited and pounds his beak on your hand and throws up seed but he doesn't peck on it. Mother says this means he has a nervous stomach. Right?—E. V.

Dear E. Y .: Sort of. A male bird may regurgitate seed when he get excited. Frequently romantic reverbera-tions will result in the regurgitation reaction. (What a way to show you're in love!)

ANSWER TO LAST WHER'S PURILE

Discover 2nd Debut and put beauty before age!

And 2nd Debut helps your skin resist a lot more than just wrinkles. Like aga lines and grow's feet, for example. Not to mention all the other annoying little telltale signs that your skin has started losing some of its natural moisture.

How? By adding a scientific ingredient based on a European discovery known as CEF (Cellular Expansion Factor) that compels your skin's inner cells to drink in the necessary pure, fresh moisture. Just rub in 2nd Debut once in the morning and again before retiring. (Use 2nd Debut with CEF 600 for mild ageing problems; or CEF 1200 for the impatient women in a hurry, or for the face over 40). Then watch science take Plays: Where Are Our Own?

By AUDREY JOHNSON

"Tonight's was certainly an international show-case," commented Gordon Peacock, adjudicating the third program in the Centennial Showcase of Plays, Friday at McPherson Playhouse.

"We had Irish, German, English and American plays spanning 40 years of play writing."

Peacock put in a plea for "plays of our own."

He felt it was too bad to have to go back 30 years or so to minor works of foreign writers. "Surely we can call on our own writers to tell about us and do it better."

And even though the actors had found themselves somewhat bewildered in the difficult no man's land between was his comment.

The program of four plays had been somewhat uneven in quality he considered, but had provided some very good intervals over all. Objective Case, by Lewis John Carlino, a presentation of the Powell River Players, was keyed too low, he said. The writing was a bit "sopo-rific" and it was therefore up to the company to impose contrasts and high moments.

A lot of work had gone into the visual effect and there had been much carefully detailed direction, but the director, rather than being tied to the script, could have gone a lot further in business and movement, Peacock said. Dunean Drama Group's selection, the very short Berthold Brecht piece, The Jewish Wife, also had the adjudicator doubting the wisdom of its choice.

MINOR PIECE

"It's a minor piece of Brecht, a tour de force for one actress," he told his audience. "It was under-played by Johanna Deleeuw, but at a level of understand-ing and emotion that we have not often seen.

not often seen.

'I just wish it had been better projected. Still I would go to the theatre to see her act any time," he concluded.

For Sean O'Cassy's warm, happily kooky Irish play. The Moon Shines On Kylenamoe, the North Pacific Players of the North Pacific Players of the North Pacific Players of Prince Rupert had aptly gathered a cast of actors with comedy sense.

"A very smooth performance of the various of the Vancouver United Players' presentation of N. F. Simpson's absurd comedy, We're Due in Eastbourne in Ten Minutes.

"How clever of them to choose a play to perform in the City of Gardens, that has as its local point a compost heap," he noted with something very like a wink.

He was particularly impressed with the teamwork of Mollie McClynch and John Crowe, describing the former as a fine comedy actress who can project well "but never overdoes it."

Before the Judge

A 58-year-old city man was sentenced to six months in prison Friday by Judge Wil-liam Ostler for trafficking in a controlled drug.

Ostler called James Foyer, 1269 Pembroke a "pathetic" man but added that he had carried out the drug sale deliberately although for a ridiculous price.

Ostler said because of the deliberate intent the case was no different than other trafficking offences.

Defence counsel Calvin Becker said the case was not a typical one of trafficking. He said the offence involved two vials of pills one with 258 tablets and the other with 11 tablets all sold to a police officer at a local hotel in January for $8.

Becker said this was hardly a "street sale price" trans-action and the officer in-volved had been surprised at the price. Foyer was originally charged with two counts of trafficking in a controlled drug but the Crown withdrew one count at an earlier appearance.

The accused pleaded guilty to selling some of the cap-sules in a vial that were analysed as a derivative of harbituric acid.

Becker read a doctor's report that described Foyer as a "chronic alcoholic" suffering alcoholic neuritis in the lower limbs. Becker said the sale was made for alcoholic purposes.

Ostler said the man had by 'devious' means" through his doctor, welfare and another person acquired a quantity of drugs which he sold.

Carl Henry, 42, of 135 West Burnside, was sentenced to one month in jail for assault-ing a police officer. He earlier pleaded guilty to assaulting a Saanich officer who was delivering a warrant on another matter to the man's home in May.

Court was told at the time that Henry had to be physically restrained by two officers and during the incident he told his two sons to kick the officers.

Prosecutor John Macintyre noted that it was the accused's second conviction within six months involving

Peter C. Knox, 19, of 1075 Gosper Crescent, was fined $250 when he pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana. Court was told that plastic bag containing the substance was found in the accused's car when it was searched by police on Denison Road May 22.

Robert J. Lambie, 40, of 2697 Richmond, was fined $250 in traffic court by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent.

His licence was also suspended for four months-except for work purposes. * * *

John Neison Fleming, 28, of 1120 May, was committed for trial in a higher court by Ostler Thursday following a preliminary hearing on a charge of possession of heroin March 30. Bail was set at $750.

Neighborhood Teams Helpful

The work of neighborhood teams was credited this week with the four per cent reduction in the number of Victoria: children in need of protection in the year ending March 1.

Gordon Wright, executive director of Family and Children's Service, was reporting dren's Service, was reporting on cases handled by the service at the annual meeting.

During the same period requests for family and marriage .counselling increased, Wright reported.

Ly feels that the reduction

He feels that the reduction in the number of children taken into care is a direct result of marriage and family counselling by the teams.

SPOT PROBLEMS

"The teams can spot prob-lems and help solve difficul-ties before the family is in such serious straits that the child must be taken into-care." Wright said.

The teams are based in small houses and offer a complete range of social services to all members of a family.

family, Wright reported that family wright reported that family counselling requests had increased 19 per cent to 1,055 families. Requests for help to unmarried parents decreased five per cent to 230 families. Wright said that 459 children were admitted to care—three per cent fewer than the previous year.

previous year.

He said that 60 of the children were taken in care because of neglect, desertion and abuse, while 58 were taken in because of their delinquent behavior.

Directory Of Parks

The provincial department of industrial development, trade and commerce has issued a directory of industrial parks and sites in British (Columbia)

Columbia.

The directory describes the location of and qualities of undeveloped industrial sites in 49 B.C. communities. Industrial Development Minister Waldo Skillings said today the directory provides businessmen with a quick source of general information about available industrial land.

Information includes such Information includes such things as location, ownership, acreage; zoning and existing services. A total of 65 sites are described.

LONDON, Ont, (CP) - If Canada were one of the United States, it would rank 47th among the states in income per capita, vice-chairman Robert W. Bonner of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. said Friday.

Addressing a business conference at the University of Western Ontario, Bonner said only Ontario and British Columbia, with per capita incomes of about $3,369 and $3,121, achieve any notable rank among American states, ranking 33rd and 42nd.

Canadian average per capita income in 1969 was a little more than $2,700 in U.S. funds, putting Canada ahead of only West Virginia, Alabama, Arkansas and Mississippi.

"There was a time when Canada ranked second only to the United States as measured by gross national product per capita," Bonner said.

"We are not fourth in world rank

by this measure — Sweden and Switzerland having displaced us in recent years.

He said the Japanese per capita income has risen dramatically in recent years and now approached that of the Maritime provinces, "and could at this rate and in this decade reach the national Canadian average itself."

He said for Canada to attain full employment or an unemployment rate of 3 per cent by 1972-73 would require annual economic growth of about nine per cent, "and we are not yet prepared as a matter of national policy to achieve growth of that magnitude."

To create employment for the 375,000 newcomers to the labor force in 1975 will require a capital investment of between $66,000 and $70,000 per job, compared with the $46,000 required to create a job in 1967, Bonner said,

Plays: Where

Are Our Own?

By AUDREY JOHNSON

"Tonight's was certainly an international show-case," commented Gordon Peacock, adjudicating the third program in the Centennial Showcase of Plays, Friday at McPherson Playhouse.

"We had Irish, German, English and American plays spanning 40 years of play writing."

Peacock put in a plea for "plays of our own."

He felt it was too bad to names like Paddy McGarrigle have to go back 30 years or and Patrick Bolton.

The program of four plays

"A very smooth performance," Peacock remarked concerning the Vancouver United Players' presentation of N. F. Simpson's absurd comedy, We're Due in Eastbourne in Ten Minutes.

"How clever of them to choose a play to perform in the City of Gardens, that has as its focal point a compost heap," he noted with something very like a wink.

The cast caught the intention of the playwright and the director kept the production going briskly, he said.

Ostler called James Foyer, 1269 Pembroke a "pathetic" man but added that he had carried out the drug sale deliberately although for a ridiculous price.

Ostler said because of the deliberate intent the case was no different than other trafficking offences.

The accused pleaded guilty to selling some of the capsules in a vial that were analysed as a derivative of barbituric acid.

Becker read a doctor's report that described Foyer as a "chronic alcoholic" suffering alcoholic neuritis in the lower limbs. Becker said the sale was made for alcoholic nurposes.

Ostler said the man had by "devious means" through his doctor, welfare and another person acquired a quantity of drugs which he sold.

Victoria Linguistics Professor Harry Scargill. An editor of the Dictionary of Canadian-isms, Scargrill says, "the basis of slang is hovelty, and this is why you can't translate it any more than you can tsanslate a metaphor."

In other words, why flog a dead horse?"

Most dictionaries lahel slang words, but the dynamic nature of language will often make the designation obsolete before a reference work is published.

A rule of thumb, for defining slang, according to Scargill: If an existing word or phrase used in a new context paints a colorful picture, has restricted usage and is basically unusual then ... right on baby! ~

"When its in general use and not restricted, then it's not slang. If a word is overworked, it will disappear or it will fill a need."

* * * For example "jet set" is no longer slang because it's in common usage.

Everyone is interested in colorful vocabulary, Scargill says, but its very difficult to determine how long slang stays with a language, and especially when it enterext.

"Hit the Trail" sounded good once, according to the linguistics professor. That 1989. Seventy-three years later the words have become so much a part of the language, even slang dic-tionaries describe them as 'informal.'

When a word becomes obsolete, the group employing it replaces it.

"This is the way the language is enriched, and its a very good thing," Scargill says.

Some phrases such as "far out" may relate to the space Others like "narc" may be age, claims the professor, an abbreviation for the word narcotics agent or, more fascinating, "narc" may be derived from the gypsy word "nak," meaning nose.

Nak, nare or nifty, slang does not equal poor English.

"It's just a new use of an existing expression in a new context." Scargill says.

On the subject of dictionaries the professor prefers tape. "An audio-dictionary will be the next dictionary. There won't be any definitions, just two or three edited conversations."

A few cassettes and a small recorder will do.

"Its the obvious way to illustrate words, and its not as difficult as it sounds," Scargill says.

For an "egghead" it sounds

The study was prompted when Cool-Aid learned last week that four young people between the ages of 12 and 15, had heroin in their bloodstream though they were not addicts.

Cool-Aid worker Rick Stamford said Friday the heroin traces were discovered by urinalysis. He said the young people came from the Carey Road, Cloverdale and Oak Bay Junction areas.

Stamford said the group told Cool-Aid they had been taking mescaline, MDA (an amphetamine derivative) and a sedative. Samples of the drugs were obtained and are being analyzed by the RCMP.

Stamford said three drugs are suspected of containing heroin. They are a clear capsule containing a white powder for sale at $3 under the name MDA; a red capsule being sold as mescaline for $2.25 which contains a blue powder; and another white powder wrapped in silver foil being sold as MDA for $2.25.

Though analysis had not been completed by Friday evening, Stamford said Cool-Aid is sufficiently concerned about these drugs to ask people not to take them.

"If a n y o n e 7s concerned about this, call us and we will have it analyzed," Stamford aid. Cool-Aid's usual guarantee of confidentiality applies, he added.

The regional board has given two readings to a bylaw establishing a 10-acre subdivision minimum in Sooke electoral area. This means a parcel would have to be at least 20 acres in order to be subdivided.

The district's planning department said last February that it is recommending the move because the area is attracting small-lot scattered subdivision developments excluded in the remainder of the region under a 10-acre restriction.

REGIONAL CONTROL

This restriction, imposed by the B.C. government in late 1969, covered the Gulf Islands and Metchosin-Highlands, areas which subsequently became the responsibility of the regional district for local planning, zoning and sub-division.

Wolfe-Milner said he agrees with a "freeze" on subdivision in the Gulf Islands — where he lives — but thought five acres would be as effective as 10 acres,
